His fortune comes from his wife, the daughter of a rich banker; and she never aesitated to give her signature when it was called for to serve the army . Espartero had imself no fortune-nothing but his sword. Of an honest but obscure family, he has had always the good sense not to deny his origin One day during his regency there was a grand soirce at Buena Vista, and an uncle and two female cousins of the Regent were announced The uncle was a small contractor for roads in La Mancha, and his daughters, dressmakers

THE HEALTHFULNESS OF SMOKE -A writer in the London Times has discovered certain virtues in smoke which have hitherto escaped public attention. He thinks London and all large cities would be much less healthy but for the artificial atmosphere created by the combustion of wood and coal. We give the writer's argument for what it is worth:

minute fiakes of carbon or charcoal. Carbon; in this state is like so many atoms of sponge. | table without ostentation courteous without deready to absorb any of the life destroying ceit, and brave without vice. size eside gases with which it may come in contact. In all the busy haunts of men, or wherever men excretions, from which invisible gaseous mat ter arises, such as phosphurreted and sulphuretted hydrogen, cyanogen, and ammo niacal compounds, well known by their intolerable oder. Now, the blacks of smoke (that is the carbon) absorb and retain these matters te a wooderful extent. Every hundred weight of smoke probably absorbs twenty hundred weight of the poisonous gases emanating from the sewers and from the various works where animal substances are under manipulationby felimongers, for instance, and on the premises of fat-melters, bone crushers, gluemakers, Prussian blue-makers, &c

Several counties, it is reported, give large majorities against it—5000 in West-moreland, 4800 in Northamp on, and 6000 in Berks. The agricultural counties appear to have voted generally against the law. If the advocates of temperance, we mean those who have temperance really at heart, and not the political tricksters who attempt to make that question the stalking herse to cover their partisan projects, were to direct their efforts to the object of procuring a stringent license law from the next Legislature, they would be tikely to accomplish some good for their cause.

WHAT THE RATS DID. - The New York Jour-nal of Commerce says, by way of "caution to housekeepers," that the dwelling of Mr. Thos Danny, No. 11 Clinton Place, in that city, was Bores and Ulcers, which disabled him from walking.

"Smoke, in truth, is nothing more than

. This accounts for the undeniable fact that London, although the most smoky, is yet the healthiest metropolis in the world. In waging war, therefore, against smoke as an artistic evil, it is not wholly wise to dispense with we try to throw off the cloud-cap of London icirculation. It is a triffe too light, but is best we should shut off the sewers from all upward communication with the streets, and by an ect of Parliament send the bone-crushers to Salisbury Plain. As London is at present constituted, smoke is the very safeguard of the health of the population; it is unques-tionably the mechanical purifyer of a chemically deteriorated atmosphere."
